The 7 Feb Run: At last the long awaited write up for 7 Feb .... You will have to read further down to see info on the 21 Feb Run! Who needs amenities – not the Sunday Hash.

Sunday, it was hot and humid. I was one of the early arrivals of the Sunday Hash. In fact we were an hour early. Best thing to do is sit back relax and wait for rest to start trickling in. Speaking of trickle... where is the bathroom? Oh, there is none. Well at least we had some nice cushy seats to sit in while we wait, right? No... well what do we have? Water and electrolytes!! Hey that is fine with me. It seemed fine with everyone else as well. TIT seemed to not mind changing in the open. You missed it?? Too bad, it probably won't happen again so long as I am her fiancé. Well that was how the beginning began and now for run... it was a great run. We had the usual leaders, the middle tier and then me. Being a good Hash citizen, I made sure to bring up the rear and that the walkers would not get lost. On the other side of the spectrum, was Lynn Yu HASH who made sure she would not mark any trail or call anything at all. In fact she was in her own hash. The run started on a non trail with some puddle jumping and insect bite collecting. It's quite a sight to see a bunch of adults jumping around as if it were a Nintendo game, or for the older crowd -Atari.

The trail was great; I managed to trip over pumpkin vines twice and get whacked by low hanging green mangoes thrice. The run was mainly on an unpaved path and alongside a klong where I got lost. But with the assistance from the locals I eventually found my way to the end.

Of course the most important part of the run is the end and the down downs. We had some good home cooking and some good beer to go with them. We also had from guests from Japan, namely Baby Carrot and a comic book writer from – Afghanistan!! Go figure. Anyways, TIT and Lynn got called out for not wearing any Hash apparel, Lynn again for not calling; our guest from Tokyo Baby Carrot gets one for running frantically away from a dog. And of course, the crème de la crème, I get a down down for not having a name. And after some due consideration, the tribe had come to a consensus, or rather $100 Skid Mark screamed out what would be my name - $100 Sex Check. And just like that, the $100 dynasty is born and I will have issues for the rest of my life.

And thus I conclude my first write up by saying thanks for a great time. The hares deserve a down down for a great run and I look forward to seeing you all on the next one.

S2H3 Tail of the Trail 21 Feb 2010, Run #275, Hare: Pussy Virus.

Location: End of the Road!

Secret Scribe Report ...

The run site being very close to town meant that many of the pack, including all of us that met at Lumpini Park, arrived very early and were thus well warmed up by the time the run actually started, the only shade being a small garage. My god it was hot (apparently April is much hotter here, so I'm looking forward to that). I decided to become a member of S2H3 and as soon as I parted with my money was informed by (Less Than) Adorable Blue Balls that I could be scribe - sucker!

Anyway, the run started on time and took us through an extremely pleasant area of fish farms, rivers and forest. The hare had obviously been intent on taking us over every rickety bamboo bridge he could find and through as many private residences, although the locals acted with complete indifference as though sweaty runners went through their properties every day. There were also loads of, rather good, checks. Front runners were back in just under an hour, although nobody had any idea we were actually home until we sighted the unedifying spectacle of the hare waiting for us in just a sarong (try to put this image out of your head, it's not pleasant).

By the time the pack was called to circle, the sun was going down and there was a lovely, cool breeze - beautiful (the evening, not the pack). In no particular order, Smells Like Victory (or Fish?) was called up as she had limbered up for the run by running up & down an 84 storey building in the morning finishing 3rd and getting a medal which she was flashing to all. The New Boots were 2nd Coming and myself (Fat Slag). 2nd Coming was down-downed for having a tattoo that looked like the mud on the leg of Canadian Bacon, who was down-downed along with TITS by Lunchpack (or was it Lunchbox?) for continually getting in his way on the run. The hare then said it was their large backsides which got in the way, which seemed a little personal, but I think that's the kinda guy he is. TITS' brother was given down-downs for being a visitor and again for being a virgin and again for showing excessive interest in local wildlife and again for something else, so we probably won't be seeing him again. His Japanese girlfriend wore an expression of complete bemusement throughout and was also given down-downs. Genghis was punished for being 1st back, claiming he was being chased by 2 of the local lady runners who wanted him, which let's be honest doesn't sound very likely.

Before leaving, the pack judged the run excellent. It was then on to dine alfresco at a very nice restaurant on a pond, with a particularly fine crab curry.

All in all, a splendid S2H3 day.

On-On.
